When the directors of Thornbury engineering company Zetkin discovered the delights of hand-pumped real ale a few years back (then available on tap at a certain North Carlton pub), they decided to build their own microbrewery. And they did – in a warehouse below their company offices. After testing their wings on a tiny pilot plant for a couple of years, they commissioned a 1200-litre microbrewery (built in Dunedin, New Zealand) and took flight in earnest in late 2005 under brewer Marcus Cox.

3 RAVENS WHITE

Murky, pale-straw colour, with a zesty, spicy nose. The complex palate is a cute twist on a Belgian classic with hints of ginger, orange, spice and tart wheat; the gingery zing lasts long after the last swallow.
